In 1998, he had a two episode stint on "USA High" and joined the cast of "Pacific Blue," playing a former LAPD officer working bike patrol in a So-Cal community. After the show was cancelled in 2000, Lopez guest starred on "Resurrection Blvd.," "Popular," "Eve" and "The Bad Girl's Guide." In 2001, he became a co-host on the male answer to "The View," NBC's "The Other Half" and the next year, he co-produced and starred in the film Outta Time.

After playing doctors on "The Bold and the Beautiful" and "Nip/Tuck" in 2006, Lopez's career got a boost with a stint on "Dancing with the Stars." Since then, he has joined "Extra" as a correspondent and then host, guest starred on "George Lopez" and "Robot Chicken" and appeared in the TV movies Holiday in Handcuffs (2007) and Husband for Hire (2008). Earlier this year, he made his Broadway debut in A Chorus Line.

Mario Lopez was born October 10, 1973 in San Diego, California. He began studying dance at age three and by age ten, an agent had discovered him in a talent competition. In 1984, he made his TV debut with a regular role on Paul Rodriguez's sitcom "a.k.a. Pablo." That year he also appeared on an episode of "Simon & Simon" and was cast as a dancer on the syndicated children's music series "Kids Incorporated," which also featured Jennifer Love Hewitt and Fergie.

After leaving "Kids Incorporated" in 1986, he appeared in The Deacon of Street Deer (1986), The Last Fling (1987) and Colors (1988). He also guest starred on "The Golden Girls."

In 1989, Lopez was cast in the role that made him famous, AC Slater on NBC's Saturday morning sitcom "Saved by the Bell." During the show's four year run, he also hosted the network's "Name Your Adventure" series and after a season in primetime on "Saved by the Bell: The College Years," he
